Steve White promoted to Vector Security Corporate role

New position supports the company's focus on new business development and growth in the managed network services space.

PITTSBURGH, PA, September 24, 2013 – Vector Security announces the promotion of Steve White to Corporate Vice President of Business Development to further their focus on growth in the complete managed infrastructure and business intelligence space.

As a Top 10 integrator of physical security solutions for North American retailers and multi-site businesses, the Company recently announced their acquisition of Industry Retail Group (IRG) to support customers that are seeking to leverage their existing broadband networks for more and more services to provide insight and intelligence into their operations at all levels.

In his new role, Steve will report directly to Pam Petrow, President and CEO of Vector Security. Steve will be responsible for overseeing the operations of Vector Intelligent Solutions, the holding company for IRG. He will manage the alignment of the organization with Vector Security growth initiatives and culture; and cross-functional responsibility for the Vector Security National Account Division new business development.

"Steve's experience and technology expertise will serve us well as we continue to launch our managed network solutions to customers," says Petrow. "We will continue to build our platform for true business visibility driven by customer requirements and Steve will help support the bridge between technology and security that so many customers are requiring today."

In addition to Steve's responsibilities related to IRG, he will continue to manage the technology strategy for the Company's video, security, and electronic article surveillance platforms.
